Body well nourished. Sores on buttocks and on right flank just above middle of iliac crest. The margins are irregular, bluish in colour, edges shelving. The ulcerations are comparatively superficial, reaching only about as far as the deeper layers of the epidermis. The area of skin involved would be about 3 square inches. On opening the abdomen several teaspoonfuls of viscid slimy brownish fluid were found between spleen, stomach, and transverse colon. There is no trace of peritonitis. On removing the gastro-intestinal tract two ulcers are found on the posterior aspect of the duodenum: one of these, measuring by Ts inch, lies quite close to pylorus; the other, Ts by is, is about half an inch from the ring. The former is a clean punched-out hole, and involves all the coats of the intestine. Its internal circumference is a little larger than its external. The second ulcer is a shallow pit reaching to about the middle of the deeper layer of the mucosa. On the anterior surface of the duodenum, close to the pylorus, is a circular patch of capillary haemorrhage into the mucosa. The diameter of this patch is about Te inch. There are a few small haemorrhages into the gastric mucosa. With these exceptions, the gastro-intestinal mucosa is quite normal. The stomach contains about half a drachm of thin reddish-brown fluid. There is no foreign body in the gastro-intestinal canal. The faecal contents are thin, yellow, and almost...
