I am sending you a few pieces of comb, and I should be much obliged if you would give me your opinion (1) on the cause of death. We have paid dearly for our experience this year, but hope to start afresh in the spring if you think (2) we can use the same hive and frames of comb--Florence Bryant, Rectory, Tavistock, November 19. 1. Judging from the comb received there can be no doubt the bees died from hunger. 2. There being no sign of disease the combs and hive may be used again if kept clean and free from moths and other vermin till wanted. Naphthalene--using double the ordinary dose for living bees--will keep moths away and the combs in healthy...
