Excerpt: . the measures of conscience, when the reason of a law ceases wholly and universally; that is, as to the public interest: but that which is more difficult, is, when the reason of the law remains in the general, but it fails in some particular cases, and to particular persons: and what then is our duty, or our liberty? 11. The reason of the difficulty is, because laws are not to regard particulars, but that quod plerumque accidit, saith Theophrastus; and therefore the private damage is supplied by the public emolument: and the particular pretences are not to be regarded, though they be just, lest others make excuses, and the whole band of discipline and laws be broken. Satiush erat a paucis justam excusationem non accipi, quam ab omnibus aliquam tentari, said Seneca, It is better to reject the just exception of a few,...
